

Drop Teachers✓ From Official Name of College

Sub matter - 1961

The name of Indiana State Teachers College will be changed to Indiana State College this summer by virtue of legislation passed in the 1961 Indiana General Assembly and signed into law yesterday by Gov. Matthew E. Welsh.

The bill provides for the change in the name of the institution and establishment of a single board to administer its affairs. Indiana State and Ball State currently are governed by the same body, the State Teachers College Board of Indiana.

Reportedly, the new measure will be put in effect July 1.

Other provisions of the bill are: One board member must be from Vigo County. One board member must be a woman. A member elected by alumni need not be a graduate of the college. And, that the state superintendent of public instruction will serve as an ex-officio member.

Creates Six-Man Board.

The present joint trustee board is comprised of four members appointed by the Governor, plus the state superintendent of public instruction.

The new law creates a six-man board of trustees for Indiana State College—four named by the governor and two by alumni—serving four-year terms. One of several amendments specified that Ball State would remain under control of the present board. ISTC now has about 5,500 students and Ball State's enrollment is about 6,500.

By dropping "Teachers" from the present name, Indiana State Teachers College, the institution will operate under its third name since it was created by an Act of the General Assembly on Dec. 20, 1865.

The present name of the college was approved by the General Assembly in 1929. When it was originally opened on Jan. 6, 1870, with an enrollment of 21 students, the college was known as Indiana State Normal School.
